Excerpt: ... PART II.--(Continued II.--The Complete Extant Correspondence between Alfred Russel Wallace and Charles Darwin 1857-1881 I hope it is a satisfaction to you to reflect--and very few things in my life have been more satisfactory to me--that we have never felt any jealousy towards each other, though in some senses rivals. I believe I can say this of myself with truth, and I am absolutely sure that it is true of you.--DarWin to Wallace. To have thus inspired and retained this friendly feeling, notwithstanding our many differences of opinion, I feel to be one of the greatest honours of my life.--Wallace to Darwin. I think the way he Wallace carries on controversy is perfectly beautiful, and in future histories of science the Wallace-Darwin episode will form one of the few bright points among rival claimants.--Erasmus Darwin to his niece, Henrietta Darwin, 1871. THE first eight letters from Darwin to Wallace were found 1 amongst the latters papers, carefully preserved in an envelope on the outside of wliich he had written the words reproduced on the next page. Neither Wallaces part of this correspondence, nor the original MS. of his essay On the Tendency of Varieties to Depart Indefinitely from the Original Type, which he sent to Darwin from Ternate, has been discovered. But these eight letters from Darwin explain themselves and reveal the inner story of the independent discovery of the theory of Natural Selection. With respect to the letters which follow the first eight, both sides of the correspondence, with few exceptions, have been brought together. Some of the letters have already appeared in The Life and Letters of Charles Darwin and More Letters, others in My Life, by A.

R. Wallace, whilst many have not before been published. FACSIMILE OF...
