Excerpt from The Dedication of the Library of French Thought: Exercises Conducted by the Friends of France at the University of California on September 6 (Lafayette Day), 1917; To Which Is Added a Brief Description of the Collection Mr. Chairman, Right Honorable High Commissioners, Friends of France: The people here are all, of course, friends of France. This day this library is symbolically opened. The pages of French literature are symbolically opened to the use of a community. You represent that community. As the ages go down the years, this body of literature may change somewhat its scope or its balance. The substance, however, will always be here. These books represent, by and large, what will always be here to speak for the artistic life creations of a peculiar people in Western Europe.
