

Lost in the Andes

This tale begins with a unique Spanish love story and ends with an equally unique American romance. Count Francisco leaves Spain for the Andes by order of the King of Spain; only to learn his fiancée, Josepha, would soon follow him. Determined to prove that she could overcome all obstacles to be with her dashing but dignified Count, Josepha endures many trials in the jungles of Ecuador. When she is finally reunited with her Count they are married and have a child, Jacoba. When Jacoba grows up she falls in love with a great Indian chief. Daughter of a Spanish Count and Countess, and wife of an Indian Chief, Jacoba charms the ladies of Quito with her knowledge of both Spanish and Indian culture. All the while, unknown to the population, her husband and his band of Indians have been clandestinely fighting their husbands in battle. Jacoba does all she can to bring about peace between the Spanish and the Incas. Little did she know that her descendants would be Americans and the adventures would continue on from there.
