

Working on Boundaries: Gunnar Hjelholt and Applied Social Psychology

Gunnar Hjelholt described himself as an applied social psychologist and was one of the pioneers in the development of European group dynamics. In Denmark, he was both a mentor and a source of inspiration for a whole generation of organisational psychologists. He died in 2002 at the age of 82. The initiative to write this book was taken at a conference held in his memory, in which Gunnar Hjelholts Danish and international collaboration partners participated. The books first section presents an account of Gunnar Hjelholt based on a series of earlier interviews that the editors had with him. Two long articles draw a fascinating double portrait: partly of an enthusiastic and ardent professional and partly of the group dynamics movement on which Hjelholt set his own definitive mark. In the books second section, this double portrait is elucidated in seven contributions written by Hjelholts collaboration partners and friends. The concluding third section presents a selection of Hjelholts own articles written over a 35-year period.
