Excerpt from The Last Journals of David Livingstone, in Central Africa, 1874, Vol. 2 of 2[The new year opened badly enough, and from letters he wrote subsequently concerning the illness which now attacked him, we gather that it left evils behind, from which he never quite recovered. The following entries were made after he regained sufficient strength, but we see how short they necessarily were, and what labour it was to make the jottings which relate to his progress towards the western shore of Lake Tanganyika. He was not able at any time during this seizure to continue the minute maps of the country in his pocket-books, which for the first time fail here.]About the PublisherForgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
