

Richard Goldstone: Apartheid Judge

A study of judicial activities of Richard Goldstone as an apartheid judge and as a prosecutor at the Hague. The record shows that a judge serving under apartheid was compromised both ethically and morally and that there is a case to answer for possible criminal liability for crimes against humanity against apartheid judges. Richard Goldstone was such a judge. Under apartheid he sentenced black youths to death, confirmed detention without trial during apartheid's most brutal period, allowed for the excessive prosecution by the apartheid police of racial sex laws with impunity, and used judicial commissions to pursue his own personal ambitions. Such a man should not be a representative of international law and human rights. Goldstone's judicial record should have disqualified him from serving at the behest of the UN Human Rights Council and on the board of Human Rights Watch. The prominence of Richard Goldstone in the human rights community in view of his past record is testament to the moral poverty of the latter day human rights movement and institutions. If anything, the appointment of Richard Goldstone to head the UN Human Rights investigation into Israel's attack on Gaza exposes the hypocrisy and moral bankruptcy of the high priests of human rights.
