Change your brain, change your life in 21 days. Sometimes in life, we feel incapacitated to consummate our own aspirations. We see a dream, but fail to act on it. We do not realize how days, months and years pass by without any inspiring change in our life. Who should we blame for this consistent dissatisfaction? What is that one thing that always holds us back? Some people like to believe that they are just not intelligent enough to do something great with their life. But, do we know for sure that poor intellectuality is the reason for dissatisfaction here? Read the questions below and try to understand if poor intellectuality has anything to do with these concerns. Why do we fail to manage our time? What should we do to overcome our fears and hesitations? How can we become more confident? How do we make people like us? How can we change our habits to become more productive? How can we help ourselves to thrive? Do you think academic excellence and mind blowing score cards can be the answer for all these questions? You have to understand very well that your attitude is more important than your aptitude. If you have a strong willpower, you will try hard and do everything possible to improve your aptitude. So, try to improve your attitude first. Change your habits. Empower your emotional intelligence. The internet is overflowing with tons of content talking about the best habits that make a person smart and successful. But, would not have been great if someone could guide us in a very personalized, methodical and systematic way? This book will explain how you can change your brain through simple daily habits and by accepting new challenges. This book will tell you how to increase mind power and change your life through five essential success elements. Here you will not only find information on how to become successful in life, but also a very detailed implementation strategy that you
