

Across Boundaries: The Journey of a South African Woman Leader (Women Writing Africa)

One of the most distinguished women on the African continent, Mamphela Ramphela has been a prominent activist, medical doctor, anthropologist, teacher, and university leader, as well as a mother to two sons and lover of slain leader Steven Biko. Across Boundaries chronicles Ramphela's inspiring journey, and reveals the staggering personal losses that coexisted with her astonishing political and professional achievements. Booklist writes, what gives [this memoir] special power is not only the political freedom story, but her honesty about her failures and her fury and her survivor guilt. There's deep commitment here, but not martyrdomwomen everywhere will recognize her conflicts about her roles as mother, academic, political activist, lover, and friend.
