

Up The Garden Path: a memoir on opening a garden for The National Garden Scheme

The acquisition of a garden that's reminiscent of an African Savanna, and a Russian style three-year plan to reclaim it, hurl Henry and Evelyn into a world of high-octane gardening. A visit to a four-acre wildlife garden, open under the National Garden Scheme, rekindles their enthusiasm for wildlife and helps them realise that even a town garden can bring a lot to the table. In the back of their minds, they wondered if one day, they too could open for the NGS. Later, a flurry of emails propels them into the world of television and the scrutiny of the National Garden Scheme. Will they satisfy the exacting standards of the county organisers and be accepted? Find out as you join them in their journey, Up the Garden Path.
