In this months financial column, Money Matters, Julian Block deals with some of the uncommon tax problems that arise from todays changing lifestyles. Block, an attorney, is presently serving as tax editor for the Research Institute of America and teaching at New York University. Paula Siegel writes about everything, though her most recent concentration has been on the behavioral sciences and womens changing image. She has edited and still contributes to a clinical medical journal dealing with psychology in general medicine. Siegel is also an active member of the American Medical Writers Association. She will be writing our health column, Body Report, on a regular basis. Howard Smith and Brian Van der Horst, columnists for the Village Voice, conducted three surveys for Viva. The first, in which they ask one hundred men and one hundred women Are Young Lovers Better?, appears this month. Smith directed the film Marjoe, which won an Academy Award for best feature documentary; he has also published articles in The New York Times and Ladies Home Journal. A former motion- picture executive, Van der Horst has written several books on rock music. Can Feminism Ease Loves End? comes to some important conclusions about the feminine psyche today. The author, Susan Jacoby, has published several articles, and has a book about U.S. immigration forthcoming with Doubleday. Have you ever walked into a posh restaurant only to receive shabby treatment at the hands of a supercilious waiter or maitred? Writer Gini Kopecky says, I thought my own experiences with this brand of discrimination were unique-until I began my research. In this issue, she explains How to Handle the Restaurant Put- Down. Kopecky has written articles for Ms. and the Village Voice on sexism in television programming and housing. After several highly praised analyses, Uta West returns to Viva with Sex and Sociability and explores the pressure to conform to new sexual norms. West is the editor of the recently published Women in a Changing World (McGrawHill). Elizabeth Fishels article, Erica Jong Has Survived Her Fear of Flying, is an insightful portrait of this lusty and highly talented lady. Miss Fishel has profiled many notable people for such magazines as Viva, Ms., New York, and Ramparts. Today's Israeli women are not the tough paratroopers of popular myth, according to former Associated Press reporter Jonathan Broder. The author has lived in Israel for six years and is now a reporter for Westinghouse Broadcasting. Charlotte Baum supplies us with smashing fiction this month in Tender Im Not. Baum is co-author of the forthcoming books Its All Right To Hate Your Kids (McGrawHill) and The Jewish Woman In America (Dial Press). There are so many opinions on female orgasm, most of them written by men, that its refreshing to have one womans perspective. Our author, Emily Prager, is a contributing editor to the National Lampoon and will have many pieces in a book of womens humor, Titters, to be published by Macmillan in the fall.
